

When the facts change, I change my mind

In nature, life and business the rules of the game are constantly changing. What serves you at one stage of development might harm you at others. Facts of life and business change too.

When the facts change, I change my mind. It doesn't matter how deeply rooted or sacred anything is, when the rules of the game change I dispose of it and evolve for new conditions.

In nature and business it's not the strongest of species that survives, nor the most intelligent, but rather the one most adaptable to change.
